

ABSTRACT

A technique for electronically presenting and paying bills is provided. A service provider receives first billing information representing a first bill and transmits a notice of availability of electronic presentment of the first bill. The service provider directs payment of the first bill after transmitting the notice. The service provider receives second billing information representing a second bill and directs payment of the second bill without transmitting a notice of availability of electronic presentment of the second bill.